SYNOPSIS

Florent, 23, is an upper class Parisian who dreams of going back to America, where he attended college. One summer he meets Alessia, an American girl, lost in the streets of Paris. Together and with random encounters while on a journey from Paris to Normandy, they explore their passions, which draws them closer as well as brings up their clashing differences.

As they face a crucial crossroad in their lives, they will uncover new sides of themselves, struggling to determine who they are personally, professionally and sexually while trying to break free from their upbringings.

JORDAN GOLDNADEL
(Director)

Born in Paris in 1989, Jordan graduated from Tisch (NYU) in 2011. After directing 15 shorts, this is his first feature, directed at age 24, in Paris and Normandy, with an international team.

Most recently he was the second unit director for an independent American feature, currently in post-production and has written a new screenplay to be produced in 2015.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

HAPPY is the result of several years of hard and passionate work, from our entire team. It is an international project, with close to a dozen nationalities represented among us and sponsored by our mentor, director EYTAN FOX and made with the collaboration of the CITY OF DEAUVILLE.

This film is also about a modern way of making movies, with very little means yet living up to industry professional standards in terms of image and sound quality. A new way, which modern technology has made possible for us, and which has allowed us to work, all around the world despite our constraints. A modern way of working as filmmakers, which is consistent with the modern subject matter the film deals with –today's youth.

A certain type of youth, at least. And a comparison between American youth, disillusioned by the American dream, and French youth, lost between their admiration of a glorious past and the very little hope they feel regarding their future. But youth nonetheless, and therefore the lust for life, the unconscious strength, the beauty of the bodies and the luxury of time, also. Time to ask oneself all those questions and to explore one's feelings.

HAPPY is the brutal and true expression of what it means to be 23 in 2014, with the nuances of a time and place. It depicts honestly a reality for I was myself 22 when I wrote the film and 23-24 when I directed it. So it isn't a reflection on a past youth, which I'd have had time to process and make sense of.

It is in that, that, I believe, HAPPY is original, different, true and touching, while remaining controlled and visually poetic.

We now hope that the film will be shared with the world and will touch people the same way it has touched us, changed us even, in its making, in its creation.

In the name of our whole team, I wish you a beautiful experience of cinema.

Jordan Goldnadel.
